

Hint

In order to determine whether a number is prime or composite, you need to make a list of all of the number's factors. This can be done in a variety of ways by using a table of factor pairs, a list of factors (usually written in ascending order), a factor tree, etc. Recall that 1 is always a factor of a number, so that's a good place to start.

