Mean is the average of a data set of numbers which can be determined adding the numbers in a set together and then dividing by the number of items in the data set.