Range is the difference between the lowest and highest value in a set of data.